[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO FEBRUARY 12.

Congressional.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—In the House the Committee on Ways and Means have restored the clause of the tariff bill requiring the Pacific Railroad to use American iron, which was stricken out by the Senate.

In the Senate Chandler presented certificates of ratification of the Constitutional Amendment, by Ohio.

Sumner, of Massachusetts, offered a resolution instructing the Judiciary to inquire into the expediency of extending the civil rights law over Northerners who are resident in the South and denied the rights of citizenship.

Chandler, of Michigan, made a furious speech denouncing the impeachment of the President. Chandler wanted the Judiciary Committee to inquire whether the President had power to appoint Provisional Governors. This, he thought, was the point on which the whole thing hinged.

In the Senate Dixon, of Connecticut, Fessenden and Pomeroy opposed Chandler's resolution, for the reason that as the Senate might be called upon to fulfill the functions of a high court of impeachment they ought not to order the investigation of anything which might tend to make them other than impartial judges.

On motion of Grimes, of Iowa, the resolution was tabled without a division.

The Senate requested the return from the House of the bill to amend the postal law, which passed on Saturday when only 8 or 10 Senators were present.

The pension and post office appropriation bills were passed.

Wade, of Ohio, called up the joint resolution to amend the Constitution providing that no person shall be elected President of the United States who has once served as President, nor shall such person be eligible to the office of either President or Vice President. Dixon was willing to vote for this provided it was offered so as not to reflect upon the present Executive. Wade had no objections to making it prospective. Holland proposed to make the one term six years. Sumner favored the election by a direct popular vote.

The Senate took a recess till evening.

The House continued the debate on Stevens' military reconstruction bill. The New Orleans Committee reported their bill, which seems to be preferred to any now pending.

Among a large number of bills and resolutions presented and referred was one offered by Bigby instructing the Committee on Claims to ascertain whether there is a Claim Commission appointed by the War Department now in session making allowances for war claims without authority of law. Adopted.

On motion of McRuer a resolution was adopted, declaring that the Government should be actuated in the prosecution of claims against Great Britain for depredations of the Alabama and other anglo-rebel cruisers, by the same dispatch and emphasis which characterized the Government of Great Britain in its demand arising out of the capture of Mason and Slidell.

A resolution was offered by Henderson, of Oregon, declaring that the people of the States which resisted the authority of the Constitution and laws and made war against the Government, have forfeited all rights and privileges under the Constitution and laws, and was referred to the Committee on Reconstruction.

Merrill, of Vermont, reported a Tariff bill which was made the special order for Wednesday.

Elliott's Reconstruction bill was reported from the New Orleans Committee. After an unsuccessful effort to make satisfactory arrangements for its consideration Elliott moved the previous question, which was seconded, and after several dilatory motions the main question was ordered by a vote of 85 to 40. Finck, of Ohio, moved to table the bill. Elliott moved an adjournment in order that members might have a chance to read the bill. Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—In the Senate the bankrupt bill was taken up. Sumner endeavored to offer amendments excluding rebels from the privilege of voluntary bankruptcy. The Chair ruled that until the vote ordering the bill to a third reading was reconsidered, it was not amendable. A debate followed between Dixon, Howard, Doolittle and Sumner, on the treatment of blacks and whites in the South. Conness said he was tired of the whip of the leader of the Senate of cowardice. He had tried to do his duty here and was determined no longer to submit to Sumner's lash. He thought it unbecoming and indecent in Sumner to accuse him and others of dereliction of duty. After further debate the bill passed by the following vote—ayes 22, noes 20. The bill goes to the House for concurrence in the amendment.

The House resumed the consideration of Elliott's Reconstruction bill. The vote ordering the main question was reconsidered, when, on Elliott's motion, the 12th section, providing for the election of a delegate from Louisiana, to the House was stricken out. Elliott then renewed the demand for the previous question, but after some debate the opponents of the measure were allowed two hours for speeches. Berrill, of Pennsylvania, Harding, of Kentucky, and Finck, of Ohio, spoke against it, and at three o'clock the House seconded the call for the previous question. Elliott being entitled to close the debate, made some remarks in support of the bill, yielding the floor successively to Leblond of Ohio and Morrill of Missouri, who opposed it, and Shellabarger, of Ohio, who advocated it. The bill then passed by a vote of 113 to 48. The House took a recess until half past seven o'clock.

In the Senate Sherman, of Ohio, reported a bill providing that for the purpose of redeeming the retiring compound interest notes the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to issue temporary loan certificates bearing interest at 3 per cent., principal and interest payable in lawful money on demand. These certificates may be held by national banks to secure their circulation. The whole issue is not to exceed $50,000,000.

Washington News.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Simon Johnson, colored, formerly President Lincoln's barber, has been appointed a first class clerk in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Times publishes the report of the majority of the New Orleans Riot Committee, which urges the intervention of Congress to secure to Louisiana a republican government. Since the surrender of the rebel armies the rebellion has assumed another form, and controls the Government of Louisiana. The latter should be suspended and a Provisional Government established and maintained by the military. The report is accompanied by a bill for the appointment of officers for the new organization of State Government by the President. It provides that rebels are to be enfranchised by going through a naturalization process.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The Tribune's special says, the tax bill reported to-day will be made the special order, following the action on the military bill.

The tariff bill will not be reported before Saturday.

The Committee of Ways and Means have restored the clause requiring the Pacific Railroad to use American iron.

A sub committee of Finance will report to the Senate general committee at its next meeting a loan bill. Some of the committee think $50,000,000 will answer, but Mr. McCulloch thinks $100,000,000 will be necessary. There will be no interference with the Secretary on the contraction question.

A resolution has been introduced in the Senate by Conness, for the survey of a railroad route from the Rocky Mountains to the Sierra Nevadas. It creates much talk. Some railroad men regard it as an effort that the Central Pacific Railroad Company will have to change their course originally selected.

The civil and judicial appropriation bill, passed on Friday, fixes the salary of Judge [illegible] at $5,500 and that of Judge Baldwin, of Nevada, at $4,500.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Times special says the Southern Governments will make all the concessions required by the majority of Congress except that of [illegible] suffrage, their [illegible] from State offices. They will give suffrage to negroes, and on account of the disability to hold Federal office to the leaders of the rebellion it is said the President will approve such legislation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Sanford Conover, the detective who fabricated the testimony implicating Jeff. Davis in the assassination of Lincoln, has been found guilty of perjury.

Bingham, of Ohio, will submit a new reconstruction proposition, providing that when the States lately in rebellion shall adopt the Constitutional Amendment and agree to equal suffrage, they shall be admitted to Congress. Until they do, they shall be under martial law.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Intelligencer says Generals Grant and Banks had an interview yesterday. The former was surprised at a statement that he had approved the military government. He said the provisions being in conflict with the powers of the Executive, he thought that civil [illegible] with military aid [illegible] at the earliest moment.

Mr. Bingham's forthcoming proposition provides that when the Southern States adopt the Constitutional amendment and grant equal suffrage, they shall be admitted, and martial law shall prevail until they do so. It is believed it will pass the House during the present week.

The Commissioner of [illegible] has decided thirty five cases of the [illegible] of the San Jose and San Francisco series. Twenty three cases remain. There are thirty two additional entries on the [illegible] and Tomales in Marin county. The claimants are rapidly consummating their titles under the provisions of the Act of June, 186[illegible].

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Times special dispatch says the President is known to be anxious for an adjustment of the reconstruction question on the basis of the leading principles of the constitutional amendment, and avoiding a resort to military government. The prospect of an adjustment is exceedingly gloomy. The extreme radicals are determined to settle on this basis.

The North Carolina Legislature has reached no result on the reconsideration of the constitutional amendment, apparently awaiting the action of the other States on account of the failure of the measure in other States of the South. It was expected to pass without hesitation.

A letter from Mr. John [illegible] to the Vice President of the Pacific Railroad Company [illegible] to resurvey the route west of the Rocky Mountains. The resolution was [illegible] the present [illegible] of the Central Pacific [illegible].

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Democratic caucus called last night adjourned without action. The National Democratic Convention [illegible].

Sheridan returns to New Orleans to-morrow.

The President has again nominated [illegible] collector of internal revenue at Philadelphia.

The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, under the act approved last week, appointed commissioners of registration. The new registry begins to-day, and the charter election will be held in two weeks.

The friends of the bankrupt bill are of the opinion that it will now pass. They propose to try it.

The Tribune's special says it is doubtful whether the loan bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. McCulloch is anxious for an early report. An official communication of Mr. McCulloch to the Senate yesterday shows that out of 240 internal revenue collectors appointed during the recess sixty five were not nominated to the Senate last winter, but have been continued in office until now. The Southwestern Pacific Railroad Company advertises their property on which bonds have been issued worth $7,500,000. They have ninety miles of road completed. Of 33,000 acres of land on the line, there is some highly valuable mineral land. Elliott's bill which passed the House to-day, only differs from the one already telegraphed in filling the blanks. The election of Governor and other officers will be held June 1st. SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12.—A riot occurred this morning near the gas works on Townsend street, between 2 and 3 o'clock. A man named Grant, a contractor, has had in his employ a large number of men engaged in cutting away the hill in that locality. He recently undertook to reduce their wages from $2 to $1 75 per day. They refused to stand it, when he discharged them and employed Chinamen in their places. This morning about 10 o'clock some 300 laboring men collected together, and proceeded to the place where the Chinese were at work, and drove them off. Some of the Chinamen were roughly handled and one of them was so much injured he was taken to the hospital. The laborers then proceeded to demolish the shanty occupied by the coolies. A portion of it was torn down and the contents thrown into the street. A short time afterwards three or four police officers arrived on the ground. They found the shanty on fire, but extinguished it. After finishing their work here, the rioters proceeded in a body across Long Bridge, their numbers largely increasing as they went, and by the time they reached Protrero there were 500 or 600 in the party. Their objective point here was Tubb's ropewalk, where a large number of Chinese are employed. The Coolies, however, had heard of their approach. Not one was to be found when the crowd arrived. The China quarters, a long row of buildings, were set fire to and utterly destroyed. The attacking party next proceeded to a place where a number of the enemy had been at work on the road but they had also been informed of their danger and withdrew. Their homes were burned and their contents destroyed. About this time the chief, Crowley, accompanied by Capt. Lees and others of the police force arrived and met the rioters. The Chief rode up to the crowd and addressed them, when they promised no more disturbance of the peace. No arrests were made.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS AND THE EXECUTIVE POWER.—The timely and valuable article by the Hon. James M. Read of Philadelphia has lately been published, reviewing the true Constitutional position of the Executive in regard to amendments of the Constitution, and the conduct of the present Executive in relation to the Amendment now pending. The article shows conclusively that the Executive is forbidden to interfere with an amendment in any way whether in Congress or in a State Legislature, and any use of the Executive authority to defeat an amendment is a violation of the Constitution. Judge Read shows, by reference to the record, that none of the first twelve amendments were ever submitted to the President. The thirteenth, that of emancipation, was by an error presented to the President, but the Senate, on the 7th February, 1865, declared that the presentation was an inadvertence and should not constitute a precedent.

The present Amendment, the fourteenth, passed the Senate on the 8th of June, 1866, and the House on the 13th. On the 18th a concurrent resolution requested the President to transmit it to the Executives of the several States. On the 22d he complained that it was not submitted for his approval, and proceeded to argue against the expediency and constitutionality of the action of Congress—and this upon a subject of which he had no more official right to speak than the Queen of England. But, not content with arguing, he arrayed the force of the Executive patronage against the Amendment. The Captains of the Executive party, Senators Dixon, Doolittle, and Cowan, denounced the Amendment as unjust and insulting, and, finally, the Philadelphia Convention of the 15th of August declared that the late rebels were degenerate sons of heroes if they could submit to "the humiliations thus sought to be imposed upon them." Mr. Reverdy Johnson called for the second reading of this passage, and it was read, while the Convention rose and cheered. When the proceedings were reported to the President he stigmatized a co-ordinate branch of the Government as calling itself "the Congress, and hanging on the verge of the Government." All this was part of the action of the Executive to defeat a constitutional amendment.

Judge Read then proceeds to show that two-thirds of a quorum only are necessary to pass a bill over the veto or to propose an amendment, and that the word "House" is used in the Constitution as synonymous with quorum. Thus there has always been a constitutional quorum in Congress whether the late rebel States were represented or not. The consequences of this position are evident and of the utmost importance. If this Congress be competent to propose amendments, why are not three quarters of the States which compose it competent to ratify amendments? But if the Congress be not competent, then all national legislation from the year 1861 is invalid, and the President, Chief Justice, General, and all Foreign Ministers are equally so. Apply the theory of the incompetency of Congress to the army and navy, and to all our financial obligations and relations, and what would be the result?

Judge Read's conclusion is, that the ratification of three-fourths of the States now represented in Congress is sufficient for the Amendment, and, secondly, that the ratifications should be addressed to the President of the Senate instead of the Secretary of State as at present. This view is presented with admirable clearness, ample learning, and discretion, and the brief paper is worthy the most careful consideration of every well-meaning citizen.—Harper's Weekly.

INTERESTING HISTORICAL SKETCH.—The New Orleans Bee gives a brief history of the Government fluctuations in Mexico. It clearly shows how little its people are capable of self government.

The year 1826 (it says) found Santa Anna in power, and saw him preparing to make himself Dictator. He enjoyed this dignity but a short time, when he was defeated and captured at San Jacinto. Bustamente succeeded as President, but in 1839, Santa Anna being released, he again took the office. During this year Bravo was President for one week, after which there came a period of confusion, during which the laws were suspended, and Santa Anna and Canalizo took turns at dictatorship, one overturning the other by revolts and revolutions. This see-saw game went on until the year 1844, which found Santa Anna in power—and called President; but in the same year he was deposed and banished. Canalizo was made President, but in December he was sent after his predecessor with a mob at his heels. Then came Herara, who was deposed by the revolution of 1845, and was succeeded by General Paredes; under whose administration the war with the United States began. This ended in 1848. Santa Anna was again President, but he was deposed to make room for General Aristo, who was also compelled to resign by a revolution in 1853, and by a decree Santa Anna was again recalled, and for the fifth time made President. He then endeavored to make his rule perpetual—meditating a coup d'etat—but before he could strike a blow for monarchy, Alvarez, "the Panther of the Pacific," then Governor of Guerrero, raised an insurrection at Acapulco and in 1854, Santa Anna the would be king, sought safety in flight with the "Panther" close upon him. Then came Carera, who was President for seven and twenty days, when he too, was forced to flee by revolt. Commonfort succeeded him in 1856, and at once took measures to make a strong government. He was active against the clergy, and began confiscating their property, holding that the church had no right to own lands. This led to another revolt in 1857 which was suppressed after much difficulty, but in the following year it broke out again, and Commonfort was forced to resign. General Zuloga was then made President by the Conservative party. At that time Benito Juarez was Chief Justice. He promptly began a revolt, maintaining that the resignation of Commonfort left him President. His claim was supported by the Liberals alone, and he became the leader of that party, which has since made so many struggles to get into power. Juarez raised an army which was defeated by Zuloaga, when the former retired to Vera Cruz and established himself as President of the Liberals, as the latter did at Mexico, of the Conservatives. Zuloaga was followed by Gen. Robles, who made a futile effort to unite the parties, and failing, was succeeded by Miramon. From him the Conservative support descended to Gen. Ortega while Juarez still claims to be President of the Liberals. From this hasty sketch our readers can form some idea of the claims of these two parties.

TEMPERANCE OF ROMAN WOMEN.—There is much said of the increasing habit among American women of using wine, and with some truth it is said that the effects of this habit will be disastrous to American children. Women need to return to the good old Roman custom of temperance. It is said that, "at the time of the labor of our Saviour on earth, and, for a long period after it was considered infamous for a woman to taste of wine. For a guest to offer a glass of wine to one of the women of a household was looked upon as a deep insult, as it implied a want of chastity on her part. History records several instances where women were put to death by their husbands because they smelt of "temetum." The consequence of this physical training and abstinence from all intoxicating liquors was that the Romans were noted for their endurance and strength. Had we the same habits, with the same Christian civilization, we should astonish the world with our physical health and strength. Manufacturers of patent medicines, which are often no better than so much rum would be compelled to resort to some other means of gaining a livelihood.

A VERSE FOR THE COOKS.

"We may live without friends, we may live without books
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.
He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope—what is hope but deceiving?
He may live without love—what is passion but pining?
But where is the man that can live without dining?"

The Record of the Founder of the Democratic Party

When our Revolutionary war was brought to a close, the treaty of peace with Great Britain stipulated among other things, for the payment by our Government of a certain class of debts contracted before the war and due from our citizens to the subjects of the British king It also stipulated for the surrender by Great Britain of certain military posts on the southern margins of the great lakes As there was some delay on the part of our Government in performing its share of the conditions of the treaty, Great Britain refused to give up the military posts until the whole business should be fully adjusted Washington exerted all his power to faithfully execute the treaty and to establish commercial intercourse with England He also endeavored to maintain strict neutrality between England and France The agents of the latter power were in our country busily engaged in trying to embroil us with Great Britain Because Washington was endeavoring to perform the conditions of the treaty with England, refusing to be drawn by France into another war with the ancient enemy of that power, the opposite party in this country, headed by Jefferson, insinuated that he manifested a partiality for Great Britain and an unfriendliness for France, that the tendency of his Administration was towards a monarchy, and that its probable design was to replace us under the dominion of a British king Jefferson and his party were in full sympathy with the fanatical, licentious ideas, miscalled republican, which then prevailed in France, and they could not endure to see our Government preserve neutrality between that country and England, or hold any intercourse, commercial or otherwise, with the latter power Their whole object was to force us into a war with England They exclaimed vehemently against the treaty which had been made with our former enemy, and endeavored to prevent its faithful execution Washington's resistance to the encroachments of France, they alleged, evinced a secret partiality for England, inconsistent with the gratitude due to our former ally, and the sympathy which one republic ought to feel for another

Terms of accommodation between our Government and Great Britain were at length reached, and what is known as Jay's Treaty was ratified by the Senate and approved by President Washington. The discontent of the opposition had now reached a stage of positive madness It seemed as if the Administration would be overborne by the senseless clamors of violent partisans who took every opportunity of misrepresenting what it had done. In inflaming this discontent, no one took more pains than Jefferson. Setting up a plea that the assent of the House of Representatives was necessary to the ratification of treaties,—an idea which will seem strange enough to those who have read our Constitution,—he wrote (Nov. 30, 1795) to Rutledge of South Carolina regarding the treaty just concluded by Jay and approved by Washington "I trust the popular branch of the Legislature will disapprove of it, and thus rid us of this infamous act, which is really nothing more than a treaty of alliance between England and the Anglomen of this country, against the Legislature and people of the United States" In a letter to Monroe, written a little later, he refers to the treaty as "a case palpably atrocious", and in a letter to Madison, (Works Vol. IV. p 135) he pours out the full torrent of his abuse upon President Washington and the Senate for the action they had taken A part of this extraordinary letter, we here quote It should be stated that Madison was then a member of the House of Representatives

"If you decide in favor of your right to refuse co-operation in any case of treaty, I should wonder on what occasion it is to be used, if not in one where the rights, the interests, the honor and faith of our nation are so grossly sacrificed, where a faction has entered into a conspiracy with the enemies of their country to chain down the Legislature at the feet of both, where the whole mass of your constituents have condemned this work in the most unequivocal manner, and are looking to you as their last hope to save them from the effects of the avarice and corruption of the first agent, the revolutionary machinations of others, and the incomprehensible acquiescence of the only honest man who has assented to it I wish that his honesty and his political errors may not furnish a second occasion to exclaim, "curse on his virtues, they have undone his country"

Could anything exceed the atrocity of this secret attack on Washington? At the time it was made, that great and virtuous man supposed he possessed the friendship and confidence of Jefferson. But the latter, instead of addressing Washington on the subject of the treaty, and stating the reason for his opposition to it, preferred agitating surreptitiously the popular mind through such leaders as he knew would approve his schemes His object was by covert attacks, to bring the measures of Washington's Administration under public odium, for he knew, as he himself tells us, [p 169] that Washington's personal influence was so great that no party could stand against it.

Observe the aggregation, of foul slanders upon Washington which the above extract contains This peerless man is declared to have "grossly sacrificed the honor and faith of the nation," to have belonged to a "faction" which had "entered into a conspiracy with the enemies of their country," and to have assented to a treaty brought about through the "avarice and corruption" of Jay, and the "revolutionary machinations" of the Senate of the United States! And this tirade of abuse heaped upon the great and good Washington by the founder of the Democratic party, ends with the malediction "Curse on his virtues, they have undone his country!"

Again, on the 22d of January, 1797, after the election of John Adams to the Presidency, Jefferson wrote to Madison, saying "I do not believe that Mr. Adams wishes a war with France, nor do I believe he will truckle to England as servilely as has been done." That is to say, in the opinion of Jefferson, Washington during his Administration, had truckled servilely to England!" The language can bear no other interpretation.

Furthermore, in November, 1798, Jefferson wrote to John Taylor (Works, Vol IV p 260) "It is a singular phenomenon that while our State Governments are the very best in the world, without exception or comparison, our General Government has, in the rapid course of nine or ten years, become more arbitrary, and has swallowed up more of the public liberty than even that of England." Of these nine or ten years thus devoted to the enlargement of the bounds of arbitrary power, and the destruction of liberty, Washington's Administration occupied eight It is easy enough to see where this censure falls. In deed, it cannot be mistaken

Let no one accuse us of "vilifying" Mr Jefferson We are letting him speak for himself, and are merely reproducing his own words

There is more of this, which we expect to reach in good time

MORE "HISTORY"—The following, it is almost needless to say, is from the Herald

The OREGONIAN spends a column to prove that Jefferson instigated the whisky rebellion in Western Pennsylvania, when the name of Thomas Jefferson, as Secretary of State appears with that of Washington, as President, to the proclamation calling upon the Governor of Pennsylvania for military forces to put down the insurrection

When it is remembered that Jefferson resigned his portfolio of Secretary of State on the 31st of December, 1793, and that the proclamation of Washington, calling for military force to put down the rebellion, was issued on the 7th of August, 1794, the great value of the above "scrap of history" will be clearly apparent

No Dodging

Immediately before its final adjournment, the 'Conservative' Legislature of Washington Territory, feeling that the "national situation" demanded its attention, passed a series of resolutions on the subject, two of which follow

3d That we regard the restoration policy of President Johnson—restoring the excluded States to the full and complete enjoyment of their Constitutional rights upon their return to allegiance and obedience to the Constitution and laws—as the one of justice wisdom and magnanimity calculated to restore harmony among all the sections, and perpetuate the Union

4th That we regard the action of Congress—extending the elective franchise to all persons without distinction of race or color—as unconstitutional and therefore arbitrary and oppressive

It is apparent that this is an utter waste of sympathy and admiration for President Johnson, as well as a useless expenditure of indignation upon the suffrage question The Legislature of Washington Territory is the victim of misplaced confidence The above resolutions were made the subject of a long debate before they were put upon their passage Now only suppose that the new 'restoration policy of President Johnson' had been announced in that body while these laudatory resolutions were under consideration! Suppose that his proposition to "extend the elective franchise without race or color" had arrived at Olympia at the moment when this highly 'Conservative' Legislature was approving his policy and resolving against negro suffrage! It is greatly to be regretted that the assembled wisdom of Washington Territory did not know what that policy is which is praised in these resolutions as one of "justice, wisdom and magnanimity" But they are now on the record as supporters of "the President's policy" Our Republican friends in that Territory couldn't ask for a better thing in the coming political campaign Let them hold their opponents to their record in favor of a policy which gives the elective franchise to the negro No dodging now!

DOES ANYBODY KNOW?—Some time ago, in noticing the stilted and bombastic style of a certain newspaper writer, we made an allusion, for the sake of illustration, to the famous Holofernes The "literary" critic of the Herald, who evidently had never heard of this character, made our illustration the basis of a long article, and ended, with asking, in substance, who Holofernes was As it was evident that the fellow had not got so far in our literature as even to have read Shakspeare, we despaired of being to enlighten him, and so did not attempt it further.

But we did think that one who had spent most of his life in the "backwoods settlements," though knowing nothing about books and authors, ought at least to be acquainted with frontier customs, and to know the meaning of terms in constant use among Western people. But it turns out otherwise The other day we remarked that "the game which the hunter pursues ought at least to be worth the candle," whereupon this critic confesses that he does not understand the illustration Really, here is the dullest person that ever was seen Long as he has lived in the "backwoods settlements" he never heard of hunting 'possums or 'coons by candle or torch light,—never heard of hunting with a light so as to "shine the eyes" of deer in order to get a sure shot,—never heard of taking fish with a "gig," in the night time by the help of a candle! Where was this person "raised?" Acquainted neither with books nor with "backwoods" customs, where could he have spent a life which has already extended through "six decades?" Does anybody know?"

The Mobile Whig has the following complimentary notice of the Northern Democracy

"During the war—that is, in the early part of it—those Democrats told us that the South had been true to the Constitution and the statutes, and that the heel of no enemy should be put on our necks, while there were men—Democratic men—to carry muskets, or to make swaths of enemies by their grand broad swords. They told us this in various stealthy ways, and news came to us by all kinds of contraband channels They said, in effect, "Hold fast! Stand to your guns! We are a power in these fanatical Radical States We can manage the rascals, if you rely on us—Those rascals cannot shoot a gun we have not the complement of"

For the failure of this party to do what it was reasonably expected, after all its blusters, to perform, the Whig indignantly scouts the idea of any further alliance with it. Really, it is unkind that this party, after all its truckling to the South, should receive such treatment as this.

REMARKABLE CONFESSION.—The France, a Government organ contained in its issue of the 28th, the following remarkable confession

"Yes, we can no longer conceal it The French Mexican expedition has been a complete failure This expedition, which was so brilliant for our army, terminated under circumstances which are to be deplored for our policy We are compelled to witness the fall of that Empire which we contributed to found with the approbation of the whole of Europe Anarchy will once more devastate that beautiful country where he had gone to establish order and progress France flinches from her work, and with her civilization retrogades"

The causes of the changes of public opinion in France on the subject of the Mexican question are thus set forth in the Journal des Debats of the 27th ult

The French public watched at first with more curiosity than apprehension the attempt that was being made to found an Empire in Mexico, and to establish an Austrian Archduke on the Mexican throne Without feeling any degree of interest in the regeneration of the Latin, or rather the Indo Latin races in that distant region, without feeling the slightest degree to reduce to subjection a new Algeria at such a distance from our coasts, the French public at first viewed with patience the Mexican expedition, which might possibly turn out well That which changed the public feeling which abruptly ended that relative indifference, was the aspect of the United States, relieved of the cares of their civil war, their open hostility toward the Mexican expedition, and their determination to oppose it There can be no doubt that the sudden apparition of such an adversary would only have acted as a stimulant to public opinion, and roused the national spirit among us if the French people had really thought that their interests or their honors were involved in the success of the Mexican venture But the idea of going to war with the United States, to solve in our own way the philosophical question of the regeneration of the Latin races, or the equally idle question of the relative advantages of a monarchy over a republic, was not calculated to become popular, and induce France to submit to such a heavy sacrifice of blood It is from that day, that popular opinion, deeply aroused, was able to exercise indirectly some influence on the decisions of the Government Why not acknowledge that the Mexican undertaking was founded on two opinions, both of which events have shown to be wrong? The first was that the great majority of the Mexican population would be favorable to the new Empire, and that the dissidents could be reduced without any great difficulty, the second which was far more important as to the future prospects of the undertaking—was that the American Union was hopelessly destroyed, that the South would beat the North, and would form a bulwark for the new Empire These were the two conditions on which the success of the Empire depended But, while the first was secondary, as with time, blood and money, the Mexican dissidents must have been reduced to submission, the second was vital, as the idea of founding an Empire at the gates of the resuscitating United States and at the cost of a war with them, could never have entered into any mortal head In fact fate has now pronounced, and it may be stated that if Maximilian's abdication be only dated yesterday, the real date of his fall goes back to the capture of Atlanta and Charleston, and to the surrender of Richmond His fall was even foreshadowed by the two dispatches by which England and Russia refused to join the French Government to propose a mediation and an armistice between the Federals and the Confederates The failure of the Mexican expedition rests, therefore, on two errors of judgment, from which the expedition originated Illusions were entered as to the internal state of Mexico, and as to the probable issue of the war in the United States

An Eminent Divine

The New Haven Palladium has the following in relation to a celebrated Democratic divine.

That eminent divine the Rev Chauncey C Burr, failed in his impudent attempt to get a respectable clergyman to trot out the tail of his coat. Of course we would not for a moment hint that the Rev Chauncey desired a controversy for the sake of the advertisement it would give his lectures for every one knows that Chauncey, the reverend is only inspired by the highest and purest motives It is a truly benevolent mission which he has proposed to himself Seeing the sad degradation into which his party has fallen, his sublime charity impels him to console the mean whites of whom it is principally composed by endeavoring to show them there are creatures lower than themselves The reverend Chauncey on Saturday night opened the Music Hall free of charge to all who wished to enter in Not very many availed themselves of the invitation, though the audience was larger than when twenty five cents constituted the open sesame The reverend gentleman's congregation was mainly composed of the highly intelligent members of the Democracy A glance round the Hall betrayed the fact To none but the unterrified could belong those intellectual countenances lofty brows, and pure Caucasian developments of the cranium Chauncey, the reverend treated his hearers to nothing new The statements of his previous lectures were repeated with 'damnable iteration' and dogmatic assertion The audience frequently applauded the sentiments of the preacher When he informed them it would be much better to stop all missions and give the money to the proud and independent Caucassians at home, they became enthusiastic When Chauncey in a moment of confidence further told his hearers that he, the reverend Chauncey, would much prefer giving his money to his white friends, the applause became frantic, from the evident impression that the reverend preacher was going to stand drinks all round We are unable to say whether the expectations he raised were fulfilled Carried away upon the torrent of his rhetoric, Chauncey mended the translation of the Bible, and displayed his knowledge of Greek

It is of course unnecessary to inform our readers that his reputation as a Greek scholar is colossal and that the universities of the world are actively engaged in competition for his services He likewise trotted out his Hebrew, the admirable Crichton that he is It is needless to say that his linguistic achievements were highly appreciated by the intelligent voters of the Fifth Ward, where every corner grocery is devoted to the study of the dead languages, and lexicons are served out with the rum. We cannot withhold the tribute of our admiration from the disinterested courage which the Rev Chauncey displays in breasting the tide of radicalism His enterprise is not the less commendable that it is about as likely to succeed as the endeavors of the venerable Mrs Partington to keep out the Atlantic tide with a mop We understand that the laurels, and possibly the dollars, which Artemus Ward is winning in England have deprived Chauncey of his slumbers and fired him with the ambition of going and doing likewise We wish him every success, but we fear he will find Artemus a rival difficult to conquer Artemus is funny and Chauncey, if he will excuse us for saying it, is not. The names of American scholars are familiar in scientific circles in England, and the Rev Chauncey's notoriety is not chronicled on the list, being won in a different field

Finally, if any of our readers, having heard the distinguished divine's course of lectures, desires to know how utterly false was almost every statement he made we refer them to a book written by a graduate of Yale, Mr Charles L Brace, whose name is respected both for his attainments and practical benevolence In "Races of the Old World," they will see the whole subject stated by a scholar who for every one of his facts gives the highest authorities. Mr Brace's opinions, and they are directly opposite to those of the Rev Chauncey, are entitled to serious consideration, while those of Mr Burr are not

PARTICULARS OF GEN. CURTIS'S DEATH.—Gen Simpson gives some particulars of the death of Gen Samuel R. Curtis He says

At about 9 A M of December 25th, the General, the Doctor and myself left in a special carriage to go over the Missouri river to Council Bluffs, intending to proceed immediately thence to St Johns in Iowa, 22 miles distant, there at 3 P M to take the train, via the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, for Chicago, and thence to Leavenworth the General and myself occupying the back seat and Dr White the front The Secretary of the Interior had ordered us to inspect a section of the Union Pacific Railway, Eastern Division, and we were on our way to obey his instructions. When we reached the Missouri river the General proposed, as the ice was somewhat doubtful, that we should get out of the carriage and walk across We all did get out and walked across, the carriage following us No difficulty occurred to us except some inconvenience from the cold, high wind and drifting snow and, immediately after crossing we took our old seats again in the carriage to continue on our way to St Johns

We had not proceeded probably more than half a mile when Dr White, who sat on the front seat facing the General, exclaimed, "Stop, driver, I believe the General is fainting" I immediately cast my eyes upon him, and I noticed that he was quite pale, his eyes and a gurgling sound in his throat indicating he was in great distress We immediately stopped the carriage, and laid him down as well as we could on a back seat, I taking a seat with the driver to give him all the room possible This occurred about half past 9 A M. Dr White expressing his opinion, from his not perceiving any pulse and finding no action of the heart that he was already dead We then drove rapidly to the residence of Col Nutt, a long and valued friend of the General, who lived on the verge of Council Bluffs, nearer than any other citizen Arriving there, Mrs Nutt had a bed placed on her parlor floor, and Dr White, Col. Nutt, myself, and others, called to our assistance, carried him from the carriage to the house, and laid him on the bed Immediately Drs Howe and Bundy were called in, and they and Dr White, after an examination of his pulse and heart, pronounced him lifeless, and believed he died suddenly from congestion of the brain.

REALIZATION OF A DREAM.—An Oswego lady, a boarding house keeper, dreamed she saw a steamer on fire on Lake Erie and in the rigging a man enveloped in the flames She seemed then to be transferred to the country, where she saw a new made grave and the sexton, a Mr Pierce, with a white horse bringing the corpse of the burned man for burial The next day Mr Brown, one of the boarders, brought a friend to dine with him named Pool, a gentleman from New York As soon as she saw the stranger she recognized him as the person in the dream on the burning steamer She had never seen him before save in the dream At evening he did not return with his friend B to tea She inquired where he was, and Mr B replied that he had taken the steamer Erie for Cleveland She then related her dream and expressed her fears to Mr B, who only laughed at her credulity Early next morning Mr B, went out, but soon returned in a state of the wildest excitement, exclaiming 'O! my God, the steamer Erie was burned last night and my friend Pool was burned with her Mr Pierce, the sexton, with his white horse was sent to bring the remains and give them a sepulchre in the cemetery, just as was seen in the dream'

SUCCESSFUL BURGLARY—STOWELL CHAMBERLAIN & CO'S SAFE BLOWN OPEN AND ROBBED.—Our town was startled on Friday morning, by the discovery of a great burglary in the Banking Office of Messrs Stowell Chamberlain & Co The safe was a double one made by Lewis Lillie & Son of the largest size weighing many thousand pounds The burglars obtained an entrance to the office by prying [illegible] of the windows with a jimmy In the lower left hand [illegible] of the right hand outer door of the safe, which was two [illegible] thick, a hole was drilled through which powder was introduced It was blown open separating the outside from the inside lining casing, rendering it a complete wreck The lower hinges of both doors were broken off They next attacked the inside safe which was [illegible] feet high, extending the width and depth of the inside of the main safe This safe was one and a half inches thick, made with folding doors They drilled another hole through the right hand door at nearly the same point they had on the outside safe blowing open both doors This gave them access to the money and bonds, amounting to twenty five thousand dollars, which they carried off. The larger portion of this belonged to special depositors They also took valuable papers belonging to the firm leaving [illegible] a bag of gold and silver, about one hundred dollars This safe was made to order by Mr Lillie of chilled iron and was supposed to be burglar proof as it was a double safe one inside the other with Lillie's combination locks on the outside and inside doors No trace of the burglars has been discovered They came well prepared with jimmies drills, gunpowder &c The clerk of the bank did not leave there until twelve o clock at night The explosion was heard about four in the morning showing they were expeditious in their work

NED BUNTLINE.—A New York correspondent says Recently I met a man whose name has been before the public, and notoriously He once possessed a noble intellect, but alas! he is now but a remove from a brute I speak of E. Z. C. Judson, alias 'Ned Buntline' His has been a wonderful career, but ever tending downward. Did dissipation ever tend otherwise? A sailor, soldier, author, duelist murderer and drunkard—he excelled in all No better sailor ever sailed a ship a splendid swordsman, a dead shot—he has fought and killed his man according to the code, a murderer—you remember the case of poor Porterfield at Nashville A hard fate indeed Judson is a drunkard now, the vile, and the wreck of a man A wretched, homeless vagabond! And such is ever the fate of those whose gifts of intellect are perverted from their high and noble purpose

Nebraska was admitted into the Union making the 37th State Thus the Union grows more powerful year by year and defies all countries in power and wealth! KOHN & FISHEL are selling clothing, etc that defy competition

THE OREGON CENTRAL RAILROAD.—We published on Sunday morning, the material part of the prospectus of the Oregon Central Railroad Company. The following was added to it by the Secretary J. Gaston Esq as supplementary suggestions and information to the public

It is not proposed to discuss the importance of this railroad enterprise to the people of the State, or to urge the importance of acting it at this time. It has been very fully explained heretofore by official documents and the public press and what has not been already said, and is deemed necessary to be said will be urged upon the attention of the public at another time. It may be stated now that the enterprise has gained such strength and received such assurances of encouragement from practical railroad men and capitalists, that this present effort will certainly be crowned with success. A little patience and perseverance in addition to what aid the farmers and business men of Oregon will be able to give it is all that is necessary to put the road through to the head of the Willamette valley. From the fact that the railroad companies of California have engaged all the shipping for a long time ahead for the transportation of railroad iron, (ships being willing to carry only a small quantity as ballast), it will be necessary to secure an extension of time from Congress for the construction of the first section. Arrangements have been made with our delegation in Congress to secure not only this extension of time, but also a confirmation of the land grant to this company, in pursuance of the action of the legislature. Negotiations are now pending between the company and railroad capitalists in the East, and as soon as positive assurances that they will invest their money in the securities of this company, or furnish the iron and funds to put it through (which are daily expected) subscriptions of stock will be solicited, so that what is done will not be fruitless effort, or time and money thrown away. The names of the incorporators are a sufficient guarantee that whatever is done will be done in good faith and for the best interests of the enterprise, and that it will be perseveringly pushed forward to final success

While we have this subject before us we desire to deny the imputation against this paper—that it has attempted to discourage the building of the Oregon Central Railroad—as contained in a late issue of the San Francisco Bulletin and repeated by the Unionist of last Monday. No attempt has been made by any editor or correspondent of this paper to discourage the construction of this or any other railroad. We have said that nothing definitely practical had been done toward the realization of any of the Oregon railroad schemes of which the public had any knowledge. Will the Bulletin or Unionist be kind enough to show wherein is the falsity of that statement? It is true that the railroad above mentioned has been talked about a good deal. the Governor has said that eastern capital is ready to invest in it, the Legislature has guaranteed the interest on a certain amount of bonds, a company has been incorporated and some of the paper work has been done. But will anybody tell us where a single dollar has been raised, what eastern capital has been offered; whether anything has been so done as to insure the breaking of a sod or the laying of a rail? All these things may have been done, but if they have the public is ignorant of it. We suppose that time and talk and effort are all necessary to start such enterprises, but money, the ready cash in hand, must be got before the railroad can be even started. It is only the talk in the California papers and elsewhere to the effect that the scheme is going right along to an early completion, that we have attempted to contradict, and this we have done with the conviction that such talk is calculated only to injure the scheme most seriously, by misleading and finally disappointing the people. It is better, in our opinion, that everybody shall know precisely how the matter stands. No great enterprise, demanding help from all, was ever promoted by giving out, in advance of any help obtained, that it is moving right along and that everything is lovely. On the contrary, such representations can have no other effect than to persuade people that they have nothing to do—that their help is not needed. The truth about this road is, that every dollar which can be raised in Oregon, in money or in lands, is yet needed, millions and millions of money must be procured elsewhere, years of talk and labor must yet be done. This is a stern truth, and the people had better know it and prepare for it, than to be hoodwinked into the belief that there is nothing more for them to do. There is no sane man in Oregon who disputes our great, vital need of railroads. No sane man will attempt to discourage any well-devised, honest scheme for their construction, but Oregon has no money to spare in aid of confidence schemes nor honest ones, illy devised. That the men at present connected with the Oregon Central Railroad, are trustworthy and that they mean what they say we admit, but those facts do not persuade us to fall in with the Bulletin and certain other parties in the representation that the Oregon portion of the road will be soon completed. If to state the exact facts be opposition to the construction of the road, then the facts, of course, are opposed to it, and we were correct in what we before said

A VILE IMPOSTOR.—An Eastern correspondent relates how an unprincipled scamp succeeded in his designs by using for his purpose the name of a most worthy man who is since dead

"The churchmen of Troy, N Y, have been badly swindled by a plausible young man representing himself to be a clergyman of the Episcopal Church in Boise City, Idaho Territory. He gave his name as Rev. S. M. Fackler. From the fact that in the Episcopal register there is such a name recorded as stationed at Boise City, he found little difficulty in ingratiating himself into the favor of leading clergymen of the Episcopal Church, who seemed readily to credit the fellow's story, admitting him to their houses and invited him to speak from their pulpits. On Sunday he assisted at the services in three churches, preaching in the evening at St. Paul's—Rev Dr Coit's—the leading church of that denomination in Troy. Before the Sabbath, however, he had been plying his accustomed vocation. His favorite plan of working seemed to be by becoming intimate with various parties, and then borrowing sums of money, ranging from $5 to $20, of them, upon the pretense that his remittances had failed, or at times that he had plenty of money, but the banks had closed. He ordered a number of suits of clothes at different places in the city, also boots, hats, and other articles of clothing. He also ordered two bells for his church in Idaho of the Messrs. Meneely, bell-founders in West Troy, and took advantage of this trade to borrow $20 of the firm. He secured a new overcoat at one clothing house, valued at $40 and borrowed sums of money of no less than eight or nine clergymen, leading church members, business men, etc. The affair has created an intense excitement in this city, especially in religious circles."

THE BODY OF MR. MCCAGH FOUND.—Yesterday morning the body of Michael McCagh, who was drowned from Couch & Flanders' wharf on the evening of February 3d, was found in the river at the wharf in the rear of the stave factory. A Mr. Murphy discovered it. The body was lying face downward, but a little distance from the shore, the river having fallen so as to nearly leave it uncovered the head being only about six inches under water. The Coroner, Dr. Poppleton being notified proceeded to the spot and summoned an inquest jury who, after hearing testimony, returned the following verdict

"We the undersigned jurors find that Michael McCagh came to his death by accidental drowning on the evening of February 3d"

The jurors were, Capt Dodge, Foreman, Capt Flanders, Joseph Webber, Barney Trainor, Ed Gallagher and Eagerstorff. The body was readily identified by those who knew him alive, as it was very little decomposed or discolored. The burial will take place to-day at 10 o clock A. M., at the Catholic Church. Friends of the deceased are invited to attend

EAST PORTLAND DEBATING CLUB.—Since the discussion between this Club and the Occidental Club, the effort to increase the library has met with considerable success. The total number of volumes is now 185, of which, among other liberal donations, 20 were given by H. W. Davis of this city. The prospects are thought to be fair for increasing the number to 300. The question for discussion to-morrow night is "Resolved that education is prolific of more good to society than is wealth"

A TRIAL OF ENGINES.—The Vancouver Fire Company has accepted a challenge from the firemen attached to the garrison of Ft Vancouver, to make a trial of engines at 11 o'clock to-day. The garrison engine is much the larger, but the Vancouver boys think they can hold their own with their little machine, against any hand engine that may be brought against it. During a little exercise, the other day, they threw an inch stream through 400 feet of hose, several feet over a pole, 100 feet high.

ALMOST A FIRE.—Last evening a fire was discovered in a flue, just between the Tremont Restaurant and Allphin Saloon. Several persons immediately went to work and pulled down the chimney, tore off the shingles cut away the timbers and extinguished the fire. A man named J. L. Morton who assisted in the work had a spike driven through two of his fingers inflicting a painful wound

FIREMEN'S BALL AT VANCOUVER.—The Fire Company at Vancouver will give a ball at Metropolis Hall on the evening of the 22d inst. A full programme will be published in a day or two. The funds realized are to go to the benefit of the Company

LARGE HOGS.—At the Franklin Market, yesterday, we noticed seventeen hogs averaging when dressed, 385 pounds each. One weighed 418 pounds. So many large hogs in one lot are rarely seen

FUNERAL.—The funeral of Capt. Holman's child will take place to-day from the residence, corner of Fifth and Taylor. The friends of the family are requested to attend.

THE TANNER TROUPE.—This Troupe will make its appearance at the Willamette Theater on Saturday evening. Several persons of talent have been added to the original company, and it may be expected that the performances will be of a character calculated to interest an audience.

THE "CRESSY."—The Cressy sailed for [illegible] last evening, with 598 sks wheat, 1111 qr sks flour, 71 sks bran 46 sks middlings, and a lot of apples, hay, &c

RECORDER'S COURT.—John Wilkinson will be up this morning on two charges—one for beating [illegible] and the other for threatening his life.

FOR PORTLAND.—The Montana will leave San Francisco for this place on the 16th inst. at [illegible] so the telegraph operator informs us.

MESSAGES.—There are messages at the telegraph office for Mrs Laura Richardson and L. E. Honeycutt or Wm Warren

GOING FAST.—Harman Bros will commence moving their large stock of goods to Vaughn's brick next Monday. But their numerous customers are already rapidly moving their goods for them apparently to save them the trouble

The Calcium Light in War.

The calcium light was found of essential service during the siege of Fort Wagner, on the James Island, opposite Charleston, S C. The front of the fort, toward which the advances of the United States forces were made, was about seven hundred yards in length, while the approaching saps were confined to a narrow strip of solid land, about fifty yards across, the rest of the fort being covered by a swamp on one side and the ocean on the other. For this reason, when the head of the sap had been pushed to within two hundred and fifty yards of the fort, further advance was rendered impossible, because the zig zags would be enfiladed from one side or another by the guns at the extremities of the fort

Under these conditions, no advance having been made for several days, and the loss in the trenches very great, the calcium light was first tried. Two of these, with jets one eighteenth of an inch in diameter, burning about fourteen cubic feet of gas per hour, were set up at the extreme left of the second parallel, about seven hundred and fifty yards distant from the fort. These jets were supplied from large reservoirs, fifteen inches by eight feet, each capable of holding two hundred and fifty cubic feet. Both the gases were made on the island, in a laboratory established for the purpose, where a detail of twenty soldiers and twelve negroes was constantly employed in the manufacture and compression of the gases for use in various ways, connected with the military operations at this point, such as the prevention of blockade running at night, of sending supplies and troops to Fort Sumter etc. The two lights above mentioned were so arranged with parabolic mirrors, as to throw sectors of light over one half of the fort, and the other over the remainder, the field of light being sharply cut by the diaphragm, so as not to reach below the edge of the parapet. The effect of this was to make every motion and each figure on the rebel works perfectly clear to those in the trenches, while the space below, from the ditch of the fort to the saps and parallels, was hid in impenetrable darkness—the Union riflemen and sharp-shooters, in fact, were able to leave the protection of their works with impunity, while, on the contrary, all the gunners in the fort were exposed to a deadly fire

The consequence was that within twenty minutes after starting the lights the fort, from which a constant fusilade had been kept up ever since the darkness set in, was absolutely silenced, and remained so during the night. Advantage was of course taken of this condition to push forward the sap, and by the end of the second night such progress had been made that the eastern angle of the fort was entered, and the work, becoming no longer tenable, was abandoned by its garrison. Of course every available gun was brought to bear upon the lights from the neighboring batteries, but these dazzling points seem to have been very hard objects to aim at, for though some of the reservoirs were hit by fragments of shell, and still bear the dents so inflicted, the apparatus was never seriously damaged.

The Premier in Another Pickle.

Mr Seward certainly has no occasion to say that, in his case, republics are ungrateful. The American people, remembering his efforts in behalf of freedom when to love freedom was to court unpopularity, his noble acceptance of his present office from the hands of his successful rival, his skilful and dignified manner of extricating the helpless nation from foreign entanglements during the active years of the war, and his personal sufferings at the hands of traitorous assassins, were disposed to overlook his short but frequent slips, until forbearance has ceased to be virtue. His wanderings have been charitably called the eccentricities of genius, and we have patiently waited for him to return to the old track, "the straight and narrow path" which the experience of the last five years has taught us is the only way to a perfect Union. And those who were his partisans in 1860, who admired his ability and trusted his loyalty, feel only the deepest sorrow when they reluctantly acknowledge that the Secretary has outlived his usefulness, that he is far past his zenith, and is now feebly staggering through the after-dinner time of life. The Secretary has built and strutted upon various platforms, many safe and substantial, and his reputation as an architect would have been wide and lasting if he had only discovered his weakness, and walked his last political plank two years ago. Ever since Mr Johnson's accession to the Presidency, his course at home has been disgracefully timorous and vacillating, and decidedly "all abroad" in our foreign affairs. The old man, in his changing disguises, a very Proteus, and always pusillanimous, is a Robin Goodfellow to rampant rebels, winking at their riots, and petitioning for their pardon. He appears at St James' as a wandering Jew, anxious only for money, and plaintively persistent, allows himself to be kicked three times into the street. Next, as a traveling manager, he shows his excellency, the nineteenth President, to ridiculing crowds throughout the North, then, as if envious of the scornful attention given Mr Johnson, himself plays the low jester in that disgusting farce. And now he makes the second soldier of the republic the victim of a mystification. The general who marched triumphantly throug four rebellious States, overwhelming in his course defiant Americans, is sent back like a spy from a Mexican post by a French subaltern, and creeping to New Orleans, General Sherman, who never before needed direction, is compelled to ask the powers at Washington what they will have him to do. The same North which has just contradicted his senile prophecies concerning the fall elections, now demands his resignation. The American people, looking back at the triumphs of his youth and prime, forgetting the failure of his later years, cherish as a hero Winfield Scott. Let Wm. H. Seward profit by his example, and he may be sure that his former friends and followers will accord to him the same charity.—New Haven Palladium.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR A POSTMASTER.—It may be remembered that in April last Capt. Montgomery Bryant, of the 6th United States Infantry, at his own quarters, in South Carolina, where, among others, some rebel officers were gathered, proposed the health of "Jefferson Davis, the illustrious statesman and scholar," and the party rose to drink the toast. For this he was tried, and on the trial it appeared that Lieut Thomas Britton, of the same regiment, became so incensed at the proposed toast that he knocked the glasses from the mouths of all within his reach. A rebel named Keach dodged his hand and repeating the sentiment drank to it. It further appears that toasts were drunk to Robert E Lee, Sidney Johnson and Geo B McClellan and that a separate toast was drank to "Andrew Johnson and Jefferson Davis." The court which tried Bryant sentenced him to be deprived of his sword for one month, and to be reprimanded by the commanding General. The findings were very properly disapproved by Gen. Sickles, and in their place he recommended that Bryant be dismissed, and sent the case up to President Johnson who disapproved Gen Sickles' recommendation, and ordered the sentence of the Court to be carried out. This Mr Johnson had no legal right whatever to do, as the decision of the proper reviewing officer upon the proceedings of a court ordered by his authority is final

Most would suppose that the case left in the above shape would show sympathy enough for rebels, but to make it complete and fully rounded out in all directions, the man Keach was shortly after appointed postmaster at Aiken, S C. This will probably cure the wounds his pride must have received when a Yankee officer attempted to strike the glass from his hand the moment he was drinking to that "illustrious statesman and scholar, Jeff Davis"

A very valuable pocket knife was once dropped into a well twenty feet deep, half full of water. "How shall we get it out? Shall we have to draw the water from the well?" The writer proposed to use a strong horse shoe magnet near by suspended by a cord. "But we can't see where to lower the magnet so as to touch the knife." "Throw the sun's rays down on the bottom of the well by a looking glass," was the second answer. It was done, the knife rendered visible from the top of the well, the magnet came into contact, and the knife brought up—all being accomplished in a minute of time

In the dim and dreary distance
  Of half a score of years,
I gaze on an early picture
  Of youthful hopes and fears

'Tis a little hermit valley
  A vale of woodland rude,
With no sound to break the stillness
  Of nature's solitude,

Save the lonesome ploughboy's whistle
  As he starts to list again
To the wild bird or the panther's scream,
  Far up the rocky glen

In this little hermit valley,
  In a cottage, dingy white,
Where in its woodbined portico
  I linger every night—

Linger and list for his footsteps —
  Till the clanging of the gate
And the shadow in the door way,
  Bid me no longer wait

Through the garden paths we wander,
  Lingering as loth to part,
And I know this night "love cometh
  And I give thee heart for heart"

O the gladsome days of summer,
  O the summer of my youth,
No song of birds was sweeter than
  His words of simple truth

Now, alone in the gloomy stillness,
  The old loved path I tread
But it leads, alas! to a marble stone—
  My love, my life, is dead!

NELLIE CRANSTON

Historic Sayings.

Lady Mary W Montague closes one of her letters with the remark, "There is nothing that can pay one for that valuable ignorance which is the companion of youth

To my extreme mortification I find that I am growing wiser and wiser every day." But does any sensible man regret that he is no longer cheated by the fictions which amused his childhood?—that he has ceased to believe that Romulus and Remus were suckled by a wolf, and that Jack the Giant Killer, Sinbad the Sailor, and Robinson Crusoe were real personages! If not, why should he be troubled because some relentless investigator threatens to sweep away the myths that have deceived his mature judgment, by suggesting grave doubts whether Curtius did actually jump into the gulf, whether Cocles defended a bridge against an entire army, whether Portia swallowed live coals, whether Xerxes' army drank whole rivers dry, whether Hannibal leveled rocks, and Cleopatra dissolved pearls with vinegar, whether Zisca's skin was made into a drum head, and Charles the Fifth celebrated his own obsequies?

"Strike, but hear me!" is the reply said to have been made to the Spartan Admiral by Themistocles, who, if he uttered one-half of the jeux d'esprit attributed to him by Plutarch, must have been the Talleyrand of antiquity But Herodotus, the earliest reporter of the debate of the Admirals, makes no allusion to the speech, and it is doubtful whether it was ever uttered. The fact that a fine sentiment has been put by historians into the mouths of different persons and on widely different occasions, cast suspicion on its origin, and leads us to doubt whether it was not invented by historians for rhetorical effect "Were I to die at this moment," Nelson is said to have written to the English Government after the battle of the Nile, "more frigates would be found written on my heart" Two and a half centuries before Mary, Queen of England, is said to have deplored the loss of the last foot hold of the English in France with the exclamation, "when I die, Calais will be found written on my heart." Once more Mr Motley tells us in his History of the Dutch Republic, that Montpensier, a French prince, protested to Philip II of Spain, that he would be cut in pieces for that monarch's service, and affirmed that "If his body were to be opened at that moment the name of Philip would be found written on his heart" Among the countless pungent witticisms attributed to Voltaire we are informed that, having extolled Haller, he was told that he was very generous in so doing, since Haller had said just the contrary of him whereupon Voltaire remarked, after a short pause, "Perhaps we are both of us mistaken." Is it not a curious coincidence that, centuries before this, Libanius should have written to Aristaenetus, "You are always speaking ill of me. I speak nothing but good of you. Do you not fear that neither of us shall be believed?" Again, who has forgotten Calhoun's famous expression, "masterly inactivity," on which editors so rang the changes some twenty-five years ago, yet what is it but a translation of the "strenua nos exercet inertia" of Horace?

Perhaps of all the memorable sayings of great men, there is none about which lovers of rhetoric have so often had their commonplace, as the famous "e pur si muove"—"and yet the earth does move"—of the silenced but not persuaded Galileo And yet, as a late French writer has shown, not only is there no proof that Galileo ever uttered the epigram, but it flagrantly contradicts his whole demeanor on the trial. To regard him as a martyr of silence is simply ridiculous Never was a martyr less disposed for martyrdom. He denied everything with impatient alacrity. He offered to prove that he had never held the doctrine of the mobility of the earth, and declared himself ready to show, by fresh arguments, the error of that doctrine. In short, the epigram is one of "those mots de circonstance invented after the occasion, which tradition eagerly adopts because it so admirably expresses the general sentiment."

Writers on religious toleration are fond of quoting the supposed saying of Charles V, Emperor of Germany, who in his retirement kept many clocks and watches, the mechanism of which he was fond of studying, that it was unreasonable to expect men to think alike, when no two clocks or watches could be made to keep precisely the same time. Not only does the story rest on good authority, but its mythical character is evident a priori from fact that in his last hours Charles enjoined on his son Philip to enforce uniformity of opinion, by means of that terrible engine, the Inquisition. Moreover, he again and again expressed his regret that he did not put Luther to death when he had him in his power

Among the stereotyped quotations of political writers and orators in this country, there is none which drops oftener from their lips and pens than that which is so generally attributed to General Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, namely "Millions for defence—not one cent for tribute" While Mr. P. was Ambassador to the French Court, Bonaparte was preparing for operations against Great Britain, and had pledged the representatives of other powers to degrading contributions What Mr. P. really did say, when asked by Napoleon, "And what will your Republic give?" was, "Not a penny—not a penny." The cent was not then known among our coin Nearly contemporary with this was the witty reply said to have been made by Thelwall to Erskine, when the latter, in reply to the former's offer to defend him from the charge of treason, wrote, "If you do, you'll be hanged" "Then I'll be hanged, if I do," was Thelwall's prompt rejoinder. A living relative of Thelwall's declares he had from his own lips the statement that no such correspondence ever took place Again, of what epigram has the authorship been deemed more certain than of that supposed to have been uttered by that prince of epigrammists, Talleyrand, on the murder of the Duke D'Enghien by Napoleon "It is worse than a crime, it is a blunder." The real author of the mot was Fouche, Bonaparte's Minister of Police So because the ring of his unique witticisms, to Talleyrand have been attributed the saying, "It is the beginning of the end," the remark on the Bourbons, 'that they had learned nothing and forgotten nothing" and sharpest of all, that "speech was given to man to conceal his thoughts" The latter saying has been traced back to Goldsmith's Jack Spindle, who says that the true use of speech is not so much to express our wants as to conceal them to Voltaire, who says that 'men only employ words to disguise their thoughts," to the poet Young, to South, to Job—till we almost reach the Prometheus who stole the original fire from Heaven

Perhaps no impromptu has been more admired than the well known saying of Louis the Twelfth when urged to revenge certain insults offered to him before his accession to the throne The King of France does not revenge the injuries of the Duke of Orleans' Of both the Roman Emperor Hadrian and the Duke of Savoy predecessors of Louis, is the same anecdote related and instead of being uttered thus concisely by Louis to the Duc de la Tremouille, the saying was the conclusion of an address to the Deputies of the city of Orleans who were told 'that it would not be decent or honorable in a King of France to revenge the quarrels of a Duke of Orleans'

Among the hackneyed quotations of the day, is the line,

"Small by degrees and beautifully less,

which is invariably misquoted from "Henry and Emma," a parody published in 1621 on Matthew Prior's 'Nut Brown Maid" Describing the dress of Emma, the lover says

> "No longer shall the bodice aptly laced
> From thy full bosom to thy slender waist
> That air of harmony and shape express,
> Fine by degrees and beautifully less."

Among the many schemes for a railroad in Broadway, New York, is one which may be called "the polyglot plan," for a steam passenger railroad over ground, a steam freight railroad under ground, and a horse passenger railroad on the ground This many titled and many featured enterprise has the advantage of an editorial leader in the Evening Post.

A reverend gentleman, in lecturing on matrimony in Jersey City the other evening, said that the present unwillingness to marry among our young people was as great a sin as if Adam, who was a perfect man, had said he did not need a wife because he was not helpless, blind infirm or sick, and had refused the gift of his Maker and had said, "I don't want a wife I can get along without her," and as if Eve and he had lived apart in the Garden of Eden forty years, after the fashion of old bachelors and unmarried ladies of the present day

FIFTEEN PERSONS POISONED BY EATING CAKE AT A PARTY.—A great deal of excitement was produced at Stephensport, Breckinridge county, Kentucky, on Christmas night, by the discovery that fifteen young ladies and gentlemen, members of the principal families of the place, who had been invited to attend a sitting party, were poisoned by eating what is known as marble cake This cake is made by dissolving or steeping a spoonful of cochineal in hot water and mixing it with a portion of the batter, and then arranging that through the rest, so as to give it a variegated or marbleized appearance All who ate of this cake were poisoned, and for hours they suffered the most excruciating pains, while their lives were despaired of But on Saturday evening, when our informant left, all were thought to be out of danger

Cochineal is extensively used by confectioners to produce a brilliant red color, and has not been considered poisonous, but it would be well for all house keepers to know that when physicians give it as a medicine, as they sometimes do they prescribe very small doses, say from a third to half a grain It would be well to also understand that those who deal in the article frequently adulterate it with carbonate of lead to increase its weight This adulteration is performed by mixing the two together, and shaking them in a bag, when the carbonate adheres to the cochineal Very probably it was adulterated cochineal that caused the fearful calamity alluded to above Cochineal is a small red insect but little larger than a gnat, peculiar to Mexico, and one or two other tropical countries —Louisville Journal, Dec 31st

AN EXTRAORDINARY DUEL.—A few days since a duel took place on one of the trains of the Nashville and Decatur railroad The difficulty started in a passenger coach and was the result of a dispute in regard to the quality of the whiskey each carried The two repaired to the baggage car, and after pacing off the proper distance, wheeled, and, at a given signal fired their pistols Neither of them appeared to be hurt At that moment the only light in the car which shone from a lantern held by the person who gave the signal, went out and lenly, and the duelists grasped their knives and sprang upon each other, cutting and slashing in a fearful manner They are both dead, or if living, terribly lacerated

The London Publishers' Circular says that "the plan of publishing a novel in a serial form was organized by Mr Dickens," with "Pickwick" What then is the foundation of the well known story about Richardson's 'Pamela." According to this 'Pamela' was published in detached parts A reading club at Slough (England) took in the numbers, which were read aloud to the members by an influential philosophic inhabitant of that village Toward the conclusion, the club got so excited on the question of Pamela's marriage, that when the last number came down, which decided it affirmatively, the members arose, opened the church, and rang a merry peal of bells in honor of the event

A Frenchman named Cahon who died in Paris not many years ago was remarkable for a bovine tendency There is a letter of his in existence as follows "My dearest friend I left my knife at your lodgings yesterday Pray send it to me if you find it Yours Cahon P S—Never mind sending the knife I have found it

ADVICE TO MARRIAGEABLE GIRLS.—Punch's Pocket Book contains the following, from the pen of "a single woman of the world" "If a man wipes his feet on the door mat before coming into the room, you may be sure he will make a good domestic husband If a man puts his handkerchief on his knees while taking his tea, you may be sure he will be a prudent husband If a man, in snuffing the candles, snuffs them out, you may be sure he will make a stupid husband In the same way, always mistrust the man who will take the last piece of toast, or Sally Lunn, who prefers waiting for the next warm batch It is not unlikely he will make a greedy, selfish husband, with whom you will enjoy no 'brown' at dinner, no crust at tea no peace whatever at home. The man, my dears, who wears goloshes, and is careful about wrapping himself up well before venturing into the night air not unfrequently makes a good invalid husband, that mostly stops at home, and is easily comforted with slops The man who watches the kettle and prevents it boiling over, will not fail, my dears in his married state in exercising the same care in always keeping the pot boiling The man who doesn't take tea, ill treats the cat, takes snuff, and stands with his back to the fire is a brute whom I would not advise you my dears to marry upon any consideration, either for love or money, but most decidedly not for love But the man who, when tea is over, is discovered to have had none is sure to make the best husband Patience like his, deserves being rewarded with the best of wives and the best of mothers in law My dears, when you meet with such a man, do your utmost to marry him In the severest winter he would not mind going to bed first"

THE THIRD PERSON.—A Pantheist minister one day met Dr Emmons, and abruptly asked

"Mr Emmons, how old are you?"

"Sixty, sir, and how old are you?"

"As old as the creation," was the answer, in a triumphant tone

"Then you are the same age as Adam and Eve?"

"Certainly, I was in the garden when they were"

"I have already heard that there was a third person in the garden with them," replied the doctor, with great coolness, "but I never knew it was you"

This is to certify that I, John B Jodwan was blind for over nine years, and I tried all means of a cure, and and many doctors, and all of no effect, and I spent all the means I had finally, I had to become a county charge and when I was taken to Dr G W Brown, and stated my case to him, and misfortune, he at once commenced to treat my eyes, and now I am well, and commend all those that are suffering with diseases of the eyes to call on Dr G W Brown The reason why I do this is to let suffering humanity know where they can be cured

This is to certify that my daughter was almost blind for over seven years, and was doctored by other physicians without obtaining any relief, when finally I took her to Dr G W Brown, who examined her case, and at once began to give her treatment, and her sight has been entirely restored I do this to let those who are suffering with diseases of the eyes know where they can obtain a cure It has been three years since her eyes were cured, and they are yet sound
THOMAS LIVINGSTON,

SALEM, July 21 1866

This is to certify that I was blind for over four months and almost blind for one year and a half, I tried several eye doctors but received no benefit, I had almost given my case up as hopeless when fortunately I heard of Dr G W Brown, now of Salem I was induced to try him, he performed a surgical operation on my eyes, and gave me treatment I soon began to recover, and in a short time I was perfectly cured I do this in justice to one who rescued me from a fate worse than death, and also for the benefit of those who are laboring under similar afflictions that they may know where they can get relief It is now about eight months since my eyes were cured and they still remain good I can see to read the finest print without difficulty, and my eyes can bear the strongest light without pain

OF BALTIMORE,

ARE ACKNOWLEDGED BY THE ENTIRE SAN Francisco jobbing trade to be beyond compare the best that come to this market. That

THEIR EXCELLENCE IS NOT IMAGINARY,

Any one who has tried them will admit and the whole secret of their superiority lies in the extreme care and expense lavished upon their preparation. Each Oyster is opened by hand with the knife with strict regard to the preservation of the Liquor, by which means all the original flavor is retained. Contrast this method with the commonly pursued of opening the Oysters in bulk by steaming, by which means the nature Liquor is lost and a manufactured one is substituted and the reason for the actual superiority of this brand is at once apparent
